Nico Ouburg

Born on 3 February 1954 in Deil, the Netherlands. Photographing people fascinated him from an early age; when he discovered the work of Ed van der Elsken he realised why. The key to the fascination is life itself. Even so, photography has not been an important aspect of Nico's life for long. Actually, it only became a passion when he bought a digital camera in 2006 and found in his iMac the perfect darkroom. This book is the provisional result. A book of photographs is always a snapshot of a period, for the photos in this book this period is 2010/2014.

Initially, Nico called himself a street photographer, but later he realised that he prefers to photograph people. No spectacular street photos, but rather the minor moments of life itself to which you as the observer can add the background.

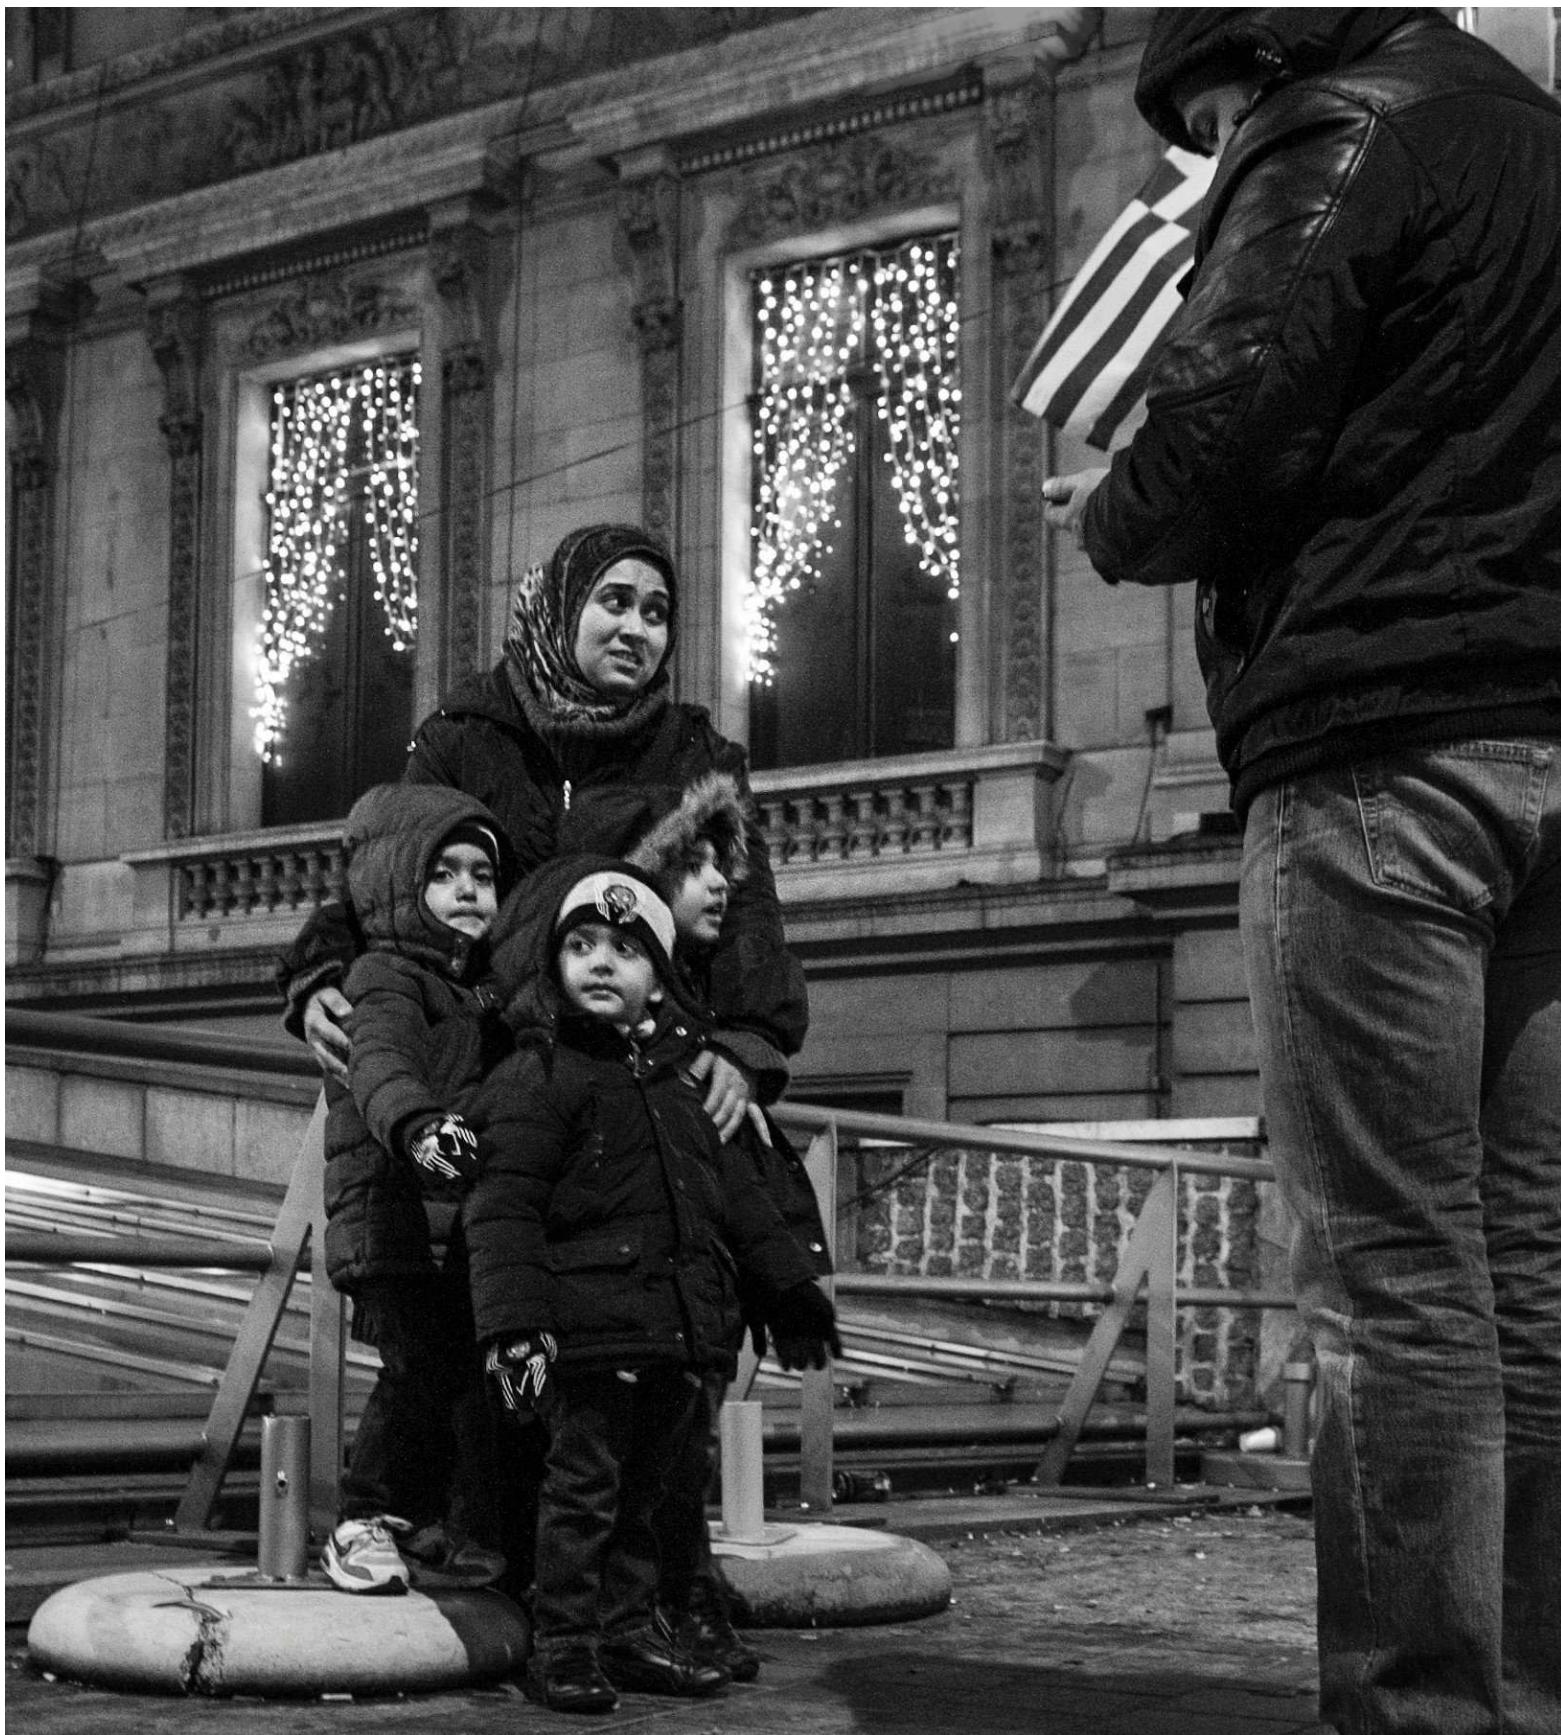

Nico is an autodidact, as a photographer he searches for his own path by scrutinising the work of others. Today's photographers who inspire him are Rui Palha and Garry Winogrand because of their eye for detail, Alex Webb due to the overview he gives and Vivian Maier for her passion to make a record. And of course Ed, with his view of life itself.
